"A Dictionary, Hindoostanee and English, originally compiled for his own private use" by Capt. Joseph Taylor, revised and prepared for the press, with the assistance of learned "natives in the College of Fort William, by W. Hunter, M.D.," was published at Calcutta in 1808; and, subsequent to the decease of those authors, when their production had become out of print and rarely to be procured, the first edition of the present work, founded on Capt. Taylor and Dr. Hunter's, and intended to meet the urgent demand of the publick both at home and in India, was passed through the press, at London, in 1817.

But, though a great part of the materials of this publication was taken from the stock which Capt. Taylor and Dr. Hunter had collected, yet such alterations and additions were made as could not be attributed to those authors. Certain portions of their work were, for the sake of brevity, remodeled and curtailed; a different method of denoting oriental vocal sounds by roman letters was adopted; and additions of words, which a farther acquaintance with the language proved to be necessary, were abundantly made in the first edition as well as in the subsequent one of 1820: to this third edition, moreover, besides a still greater increase of words in the body of the work, a copious Index is subjoined, by means of which the publication will prove well fitted to serve, also, as a reversed, or English and Hindustani Dictionary.

In India, extensive as it is, and peopled by many different races of men, variety of dialect must be expected to occur in the most prevalent colloquial language, whether denominated zabān-i-urdū, rekhta, hindī, Hindūstānī, or Dakhanī; and words of common use in some parts may appear strange, or be even unintelligible, to the inhabitants of others. Thus, though the language here treated of, and which most generally prevails in Hindustan proper or in the Dakhan, at Delhi, Agra, Hyderabad, or in the Carnatic, is essentially one and the same; yet, through so wide a range of country, differences will present themselves in various particulars of speech. With a view, therefore, to extend the utility of the work, many words, gathered from Dakhani compositions in manuscript or in print, old or modern, are now inserted; and, when they are supposed to be peculiar to that dialect, they are marked as such, for the purpose of distinction.

Of the productions in print from which extracts have been made, besides Dr. Hunter's above stated, may be especially mentioned the "Prem Sagur," printed at Calcutta in 1825; "a Dictionary English and Hindostany" (by Dr. Harris), printed at Madras in 1790; "an Introduction to the Study of the Hindostany Language, as spoken in the Carnatic," printed at Madras in 1808; "Dukhnee Unwari Soheilee," printed at Madras in 1824; and "Qanoon-e-islam," published by Dr. Herklots, at London, in 1832.

It may here be noticed, moreover, that the "additional" portion will be found to relate chiefly to the dialect of the Dakhan: and, collected as it was from various sources, whilst the principal part of the work was passing through the press, it is hoped that indulgence will be shewn both to the manner in which it is submitted to the publick, and to the want of certainty existing in some cases, which is indicated by a mark of interrogation, to shew that in these particulars further inquiry is needed.

Before the words herein explained, the initial roman letter of the name of the language from which each appears derived, if known, is marked; thus H. for Hindī, S. for Sanskrit, A. for Arabic, P. for Persian, T. for Turkish, G. for Greek, E. for English, and the like; but, where the derivation is unknown, U. is prefixed: and, if the word has varied in form from the original or is doubtful as to derivation, a slanting or italick letter is, by way of discrimination, generally adopted.

In denoting the pronunciation of words by italick letters, the vowels a, e, i, o, u, are intended to represent the Italian powers of the same letters; and the consonants, for the most part, convey the sounds commonly appropriated to them in English: thus,

a	corresponding to the Arabic vowel fat'ha is sounded as in "America."
ā	alif-i-mamdūda , is sounded as in "all," "ball."

D I C T I O N A R Y,

HINDŪSTĀNĪ AND ENGLISH.

Alif is the first letter of the Arabic and Persian alphabets. At the beginning of Hindī words, denoted by the characters of these alphabets, ʾ with the vowel fatha, written or more commonly understood, represents the Devanāgarī letter अ a; with kasr, the letter इ i; with zamm, the letter उ u; and with the sign madda ~, the letter आ ā: at the beginning of Hindī words, moreover, when ʾ is followed immediately by ي, the two letters together, according to the vowel written or understood with ʾ, stand for ई ī ए e or ऐ ai; and when ʾ is followed in like manner by و, these two letters together represent, according to the vowel used with ʾ, either ऊ ū ओ o or औ au; but, in the middle or at the end of such words, ʾ stands invariably for आ ā,

In the representation of numbers by the Arabic letters, ʾ stands for one; whence it is used also as a symbol of the deity: it signifies, moreover, the first day of the week, or Sunday; and, in astronomical descriptions, the sign Taurus of the Zodiac. From its form, too, this letter is adopted to denote straightness; hence, also, a brave man. And, in allusion to its simple, unadorned, figure, it is sometimes used to mean naked.

In Arabic words, at the beginning, it may be the alf تفصيل و تقصير alif-i-tafzīl wa takṣīr, used to form adjectives in a comparative degree; as, افضل afṣal from فاضل fāṣil, احقر aḥqar from حقير ḥaqīr: and, with ل (lām) it may compose the article ال (al); in which case, if the word which it precedes is subsequent to another word in construction, this ʾ termed وصلي waṣṭī, conjunctive, is written only but not sounded. At the beginning or in the middle, it may be the alf جمع alif-i-jamʿ, sign of the plural number; as, in احكام aḥkām, رجال rijāl. In the middle, after the second radical letter, it may be adopted to form adjectives in the superlative degree; as, ظلام ẓallām from ظالم ẓālim. And, at the end, it may denote the accusative case of certain nouns, used as adverbs only in Hindustani; so تخمینا takḥmīnā: or a plural form; as امرا umarā: or, it may be the alf تانیث alif-i-tāniṯ, sign of the feminine gender; which is either ممدودة mamdūda, long, as in حمرا ḥamrā red; or مقصورة maqṣūra short, as in حبلی ḥubḷā, pregnant.

In Persian words, at the beginning, it may be the alf وصلي alif-i-waṣṭī, which is liable to be cut off; as in انسون afsūn, افشان afshān, which are also written and pronounced فسون fusūn, فشان fishān. In the middle, between two nouns, it denotes continuity, proximity or conjunction; as, شبشب shab-ā-shab, سراپا sar-ā-pā, تگاپو tag-ā-pū: or, in the middle of a word, it seems in some cases redundant; as, ستمگار sitamgār for ستمگر sitamgar. And, at the end, it may be the الف ندا alif-i-nidā, sign of the vocative case; as, ساقیا sākiyā, O cup-bearer! شاه shāhā, O king! or, it may be used in an exclamation of disapprobation, praise, or grief; as, بدا badā, how bad! خوشا khushā, how good! blessed! درینا dareghā, what sorrow! alas! or, subjoined to adjectives, it may form abstract nouns; as, گرما garmā, heat, from گرم garm, hot.

In Hindī words, at the end, ا may be used to form the diminutive of a noun; as, ذبیا a very small box, from ذبی: or, adjectives from substantives; as, بیوکھا hungry, from بھوکھ.

ا. ا (for ا) a, A name of Vishnu: also, when prefixed to a word, it is an inseparable particle, signifying negation or privation; so, ادرھم adherm अधर्म Injustice, from دھرم धर्म Justice; अधन Poor, from دھن धन Wealth.

ا. آ for (آ) ā, prep. To, at, until, unto, as far as. It is the opposite of اَو ava, marks the limits of action; and, prefixed to certain verbs, reverses their meaning.

ب

- ب be, called با bā in Arabic, is the second letter of the Arabic and Persian alphabets: and, in the representation of Hindī words by the letters of these alphabets, it corresponds to the Nāgarī ब; or, with s (he) subjoined, to म. When used numerically, according to the اجد or arrangement of the Arabic alphabet to signify numbers, it stands for two; hence, it is used to denote the second day of the week, Monday; and, in astronomical calculations, the sign Gemini. By way of abbreviation, moreover, it is occasionally written for the month رجب rajab, of which word it is the final letter. At the middle or end of a word, this letter is sometimes changed to ف or م: as, تب tap for تاب tab, A fever; زبان zafān for زبان zabān, Language; غزم ghuzhm for غزب ghuzhb, A grape-stone. In Persian words, too, it is occasionally interchanged with و: and in such as are borrowed or derived from the Sanskrit, it is frequently substituted for the Nāgarī letter व.

ت te, in Arabic called tā, is the third letter of the Arabic and the fourth of the Persian alphabet. In the representation of Hindī words by the letters of these alphabets, it stands for the Nāgarī त or, with s (he) subjoined, for थ. When used numerically, it denotes 400, according to the abjad, or appropriation of the letters of the Arabic alphabet to represent numbers.

At the beginning of Arabic words, this letter is much used to form verbal nouns of various forms; as, تطاول from علم, تعرف from عرف, تطاول from طول: and, prefixed to a noun, it may be the تاء القسم denoting an oath; as, تالله By God. At the end of words in that language, moreover, it may be the تاء تانيث sign of the feminine gender; as, ملكة A queen, from ملك A king: and, this termination may be adopted to restrict the noun to unity; as, تمرّة A single date, from تمر: or, it may be used in the formation of infinitives or verbal nouns; as, مكافات from كفي: or, the superlative degree of some few adjectives; as, علّامة (changed in Hindustani to علّامه) Very learned.

At the end of Persian words, ت may represent the pronoun of the second person singular: or it may be redundant; as in بالش for بالش A pillow. In different parts of a word, it may be substituted for د (dāl); as, دنيور for تنبور A drum, زردشت for زرتشت Zoroaster, كنيث for كنيد Ye may do: and, it is also found used for ج (jīm); as, تاراج for تارات Plunder. In some instances, too, ت suffers apocope; as, راس for راست True, دشنام for دشنام (bad name) Abuse, دشمن for دشمن (bad heart) Enemy.

In Sanskrit, its correspondent and equivalent letter is ज: and, to represent the aspirated letter jh, it is combined with h thus جه. In Arabic, it stands for 3 in the ahjad numeration, for Tuesday in almanacks, and for the sign Cancer in astronomy: it may, also, stand as an abbreviation for the month جمادى الآخر. It is sometimes used for كاش for كاج as شاج Would! for زاج for جوجه A chicken; for گف (particularly in conformity to Arabic pronunciation), as فرج for فريز for فريزج for فریوزج A Turk Europe; for س as فریوزج for فریوزج quaise. Again, for ج are used, ت as تارات for تاراج Plunder; ز as کزدم for کجدم A scorpion; گ as اخشیگ for اخشیج Contrary. Rarely it is redundant, as دیاج for دیا Brocade. In words borrowed from the Sanskrit, ज्ञ is generally substituted for य which is pronounced as ज्ञ by the Bengalees, Tirhutiyā and others. In the Braj dialect, ज ju may have the same import as جو jo, That, which, when.

خ

خ Called خائي معجمه and خائي منقوله the seventh letter of the Arabic alphabet, is a guttural letter, uttered by compression of the top of the throat near the mouth. It has no corresponding sound in the English language, but is expressed by the Scottish pronunciation of gh in the word right. It seems to have the power of the Greek χ. Meninski says it is the ch of Poland, but pronounced somewhat more strongly. In numeration by the letters of the Arabic alphabet, it stands for 600. And in astronomy, it denotes the planet Mars.

Its permutations are 1. into غ as ستیغ for سبغ A spear, straight, high. تاغ for تاج A tree fit for firewood. 2. into ز as خاک for خاک An egg. 3. into ح as حکت for حکک name of a plant (Tribulus), a caltrop thrown in the road to prevent an enemy's approach. It is substituted 1. for ز as هجیر for هجر Meridian, manner, bitter plants rejected by cattle. 2. for ق as جعماق for جعماق A flint; جوق for جوق A multitude. In the conjugation of Persian verbs, خ of the preterite is changed in the aorist 1. into ز as بزد from بخت 2. into س as شناسد from شناخت 3. into ش as فروشد from فروخت. In derivation کت appears to be sometimes put for خ; thus, کمان A bow may be deduced from خمّان Bending.

د dāl called دال مهمله or دال غیر معجمه is the eighth letter of the Arabic, and the tenth of the Persian alphabet. In the representation of Hindī words by the letters of these alphabets, it denotes the Nāgarī द (da); or, with s (he) subjoined, ध (dha).

In the numerical application of the Arabic alphabet, د (dāl) stands for four; hence, in almanacks, it represents the fourth day of the week, Wednesday: it is, moreover, used in astronomy to denote the planet Mercury, or the sign Leo of the Zodiack.

This letter, in Persian, may be changed to ت (te); as, in بدتر for بتر Worse: or, when the next preceding letter is و, ی, or ا, or is moveable by a short vowel, it may be converted to ن (gāl); as استاد for استاذ A master, گنبد for گنبد A dome: (see Lumsden's Persian Gram. p. 24). And, in Arabic words of the measure افعال, when د, ذ, or ز is the first letter of the root, د (dāl) is substituted for the servile ت (te); as, in زحم از دحام from زحم.

ذ Called ذال مَعْمَد and ذال مُخَذ is the ninth letter of the Arabic alphabet. Its existence in Persian, except as a substitute for د (see د), appears very doubtful. It is pronounced by the Arabs like th in the English word thou; but, in Hindūstānī, its sound is not to be distinguished from that of ز z. In denoting numbers by the letters of the Arabic alphabet, it stands for 700: and, by way of abbreviation, it is written for ذو الحجہ the last month of the Arabic lunar year.

If ذ be the first radical of an Arabic verb, the ت in the form انتعال is changed into د, and either the د or ذ is changed into the other of the two, which is doubled; as, from ذکر comes اذکر or اذکر.

 sponding character in the Arabic or Sanskrit.
 Its sound is that of s in the English word pleasure; or, of the French g or j in gens, jour:
 and, that sound is here denoted by zh. This letter is sometimes changed to ج as بچمردہ pajmurda, for پزمرده pazhmurda.

س sin, usually named سین مہملہ or سین غیر
 the twelfth letter in the Arabic and fifteenth in the Persian alphabet, corresponds to स in Sanskrit. Its sound is that of the English s in sun, sin. In denoting numbers by the letters of the Arabic alphabet, it stands for 60. In almanacks it represents the Sun, and a sextile aspect of the planets. It is also used as an abbreviation for the salutation السلام.

It is changed (in Arabic) (1) into ي as يادي for طبت The sixth: (2) into ت as تادي for طس A bason: (3) into ص as صلح for صلح The last day of the month; and (in Pers.) اصفهان for اسپهان: (4) into ا as دساها for دساها He exposed her to deceit: (5) (in Arab. and Pers.)
 into ز; see ز: (6) (in Pers.) into چ as خروج for خروس A cock: (7) into ش as فرشته for فرست Sent: (8) into س as آماہ for آماہ A swelling: this last substitution, also, takes place in the aorist of Persian verbs which have س
 before تن of the infinitive, as خواہم from خواستن:
 (9) (in the same tense) into ن as بندم from بستن: (10) into ي as آرایم from آراستن: (11)
 into ل as گلم from گستن.

It is substituted (1) in the aorist of Persian verbs for ش as شناسم from شناختن: (2) for ش as مشک when adopted into Arabic for مشک
 Musk.

In the aorist of some verbs it suffers elision, as گریستن from گریستن To weep.

Prefixed to the aorist of Arabic verbs it implies quickness or expedition, as سیتصر He will quickly assist.

ش

ش shīn, called شِین or شِینِ مَعْجَمَه is the thirteenth letter of the Arabic and sixteenth of the Persian alphabet, corresponding nearly to श in Sanskrit. Its sound is that of the English sh; of the French ch, as in cheval; and, of the Italian sc, as in scimia. In denoting numbers by the letters of the Arabic alphabet, it stands for 300. It is used as an abbreviation for the word شَمَال North; and, in dates of letters, &c. for the month شَعْبَان.

In Persian it may be used, 1. To mark the pronoun of the third person singular, in the genitive or accusative case; as, نامش His name, نایش His praise, گفتم او را I said to him: and, it is frequently disjoined from the noun to which it has reference; as in this line of Ghanīmat, زحیرتہا خرد گردید آبش His understanding was turned to water by astonishment, for ازحیرتہا خردش آب شد. If, moreover, it relates to the same person as the agent of the sentence, it stands for the reciprocal pronoun خود; as

نہد خور ہر طرف دامی زتارش

کزان رو برتوی گردد شکارش

The sun spreads in every direction a net made of his rays; that, by means thereof he may catch a reflected image. 2. To form the hāṣil bi-t-maṣdar, verbal noun or noun of action. In this case it is quiescent, and requires the vowel kasr to the preceding letter; as, پرسش Asking, سوزش Burning, &c.

In the conjugation of Persian verbs, to form the aorist and tenses derived from the aorist, ش preceding تن of the infinitive is changed, if it follow ا, into ر; as نگارم &c. from نگاشتن; or, if it follow any other letter, sometimes into ر, as گذرم from گذشتن; sometimes into س, as نویسم from نوشتن; and, غ of the infinitive is changed into ش, as فروشم from فروختن.

For ش is sometimes substituted چ, as پاشان for Sprinkling; sometimes س, as سارک for A species of nightingale; sometimes, in the end of words, چ, as کاش for Would to God! And, it may be substituted for س; as کشتي for کشتي Wrestling.

In Arabic, when a verb, the first radical letter of which is ش, appears in the form انتعال, the servile ت is sometimes though but rarely united, by idghām, with the ش; as اشبه ishshabaha for اشتبه ishtabaha, He doubted.

ناز چمن وهي هي بلبل مي گو خزان هي
تهني جو زرد بهي هي سو شاخ زعفران هي

Nāz-i-chaman wah-i hai bulbul se, go khizān hai; tahnī jo zard bhī hai so shākh-i-zāfarān hai, The parterre still displays the same coquetry towards the nightingale, although the autumn is arrived; the branches, though withered, are as proud as ever. (The conceit, which depends on the yellow colour of a withered leaf and of saffron, is incapable of translation). شاي shākh shāne, is applied to various reports, calumnies, or complaints: so, Mīr again says:

شاخ شاي هزار نکلين گي
جو گيا اسکي زلف کا يکتار

Shākh shāne hazār niklengē; jo gayā uskī zulf kā ek tār, If one hair from her locks should be missing, a thousand reports would be spread abroad.

ص ṣād, called صاد غیر منقولہ and صاد مهملة the fourteenth letter of the Arabic alphabet, does not properly occur in the Persian language; but, in a few words it has, in modern times, been substituted for the original س to distinguish them from others of a different signification; as, in صد, originally صد One hundred; and in شصت originally شست Sixty; to prevent their being confounded with صد A wall, and شست An aim. It has no corresponding letter in the Sanskrit alphabet. In Persia and Hindūstān, its pronunciation is hardly distinguishable from that of س; but, among the Arabs, its sound is stronger than the last and with a mixture of w. In the notation of numbers by the letters of the Arabic alphabet it represents 90. As an abbreviation it is used for صفر the name of the second month in the Arabian calendar.

It is one of the radical letters. Some Arabic words are written indifferently with ص and س; as صراط, or سراط A road. Sometimes, when quiescent in the infinitive of a verb, it is changed into ز as فزذ for فصد To open a vein. When Persian words containing چ are introduced into Arabic, the چ is changed into ص as صين for چين China.

ض ṣad, called ضاد معجمہ and ضاد منقولہ the fifteenth letter of the Arabic alphabet, does not occur in Persian, nor is there any corresponding letter in Sanskrit. In Persia and Hindūstān its pronunciation is hardly distinguished from that of ز; but, in Arabia it is a mixed sound of d, th, and w, only to be acquired from natives of that country. In the notation of numbers by the Arabic letters, it stands for 800. It is one of the radical letters. The ذ of Persian words, when they are introduced into Arabic, is often changed into this letter, as ضحاک for ذحاک See under ح. When three of these letters meet together, as in تقضض the darting of a hawk upon his prey, the last is changed into ی, as تقضي. And in verbs of the measure افعل the servile ت after this letter is changed to ط or to ض as اضطراب or اضراب from ضرب.

ط

ط to'e, or in Arabic tā, called طای مهمله or طای, the sixteenth letter of the Arabic alphabet, does not occur in pure Persian; but, in compliance with Arabic orthography, it is sometimes introduced in Persian words which were originally written with ت; as, طبرزد for تبرزد, Sugar-candy; طبرخون for تبرخون, Red sanders.

It has no corresponding character in Sanskrit. Its genuine sound is stronger and harsher than that of ت. As a numeral, in the numerical application of the Arabic alphabet, it stands for 9: and, in almanacks it represents the sign Capricorn. When this letter is the first radical of Arabic verbs, the servile ت of the measures تفاعل and انفعال may be changed into ط, which is joined by idghām with the ط of the root; and, if the first letter thus becomes quiescent, a hamza is prefixed; as, for تطهر ittahhara.
